For YOKOHAMA, SAN FRANCISCO. In common justice to so well-abused an official, we must however admit that he has been, and will be, justified in treating with scant consideration anything which comes from the Hongkong Chamber of Commerce. Here we have a body of merchants presumed to equal in the and Granger; Deane and Goldney; Terry average the wealth, intelligence, and publand Sim. Foss and Bottomley won, after lic spirit of the mercantile communities of China, and to represent those qualities as existing at Hongkong, Canton, Swatow and Amoy. They have been told over and over again that they can if they will powerfully influence the course of policy in China so far as regards purely mercantile matters, and H. M. Consul at Canton has, under instructions from Pekin, actually asked for their opinion on a question which must vitally affect trade with this country. And yet eleven members only could found to respond to the invitation, while some of our leading men were conspicuous by their absence! The arathy of Hongkong on publicquestions is indeed a "fearfuland wonderful thing,"-fearful in the contempt into which it brings the community, and wonderful as exemplified by a community which is, to quote the words of a former admirer, "one of the most, if not the most intellectual for its size, in | Davies, from Bombay with dates to the 22d the British dominions !"

At least the powers held by the Acting Attorney General could not be more than were actually given by the Ordinance. These remarks had additional point when considered in connection with the inapplicability of informations to this Colony. The gravamen of the charge appeared evidently to be that the publication of the libels had a tendency to produce a rupture of amicable relations between this Government and the King of Portugal. Mr Havllar continued, that the falsehood or truth was immaterial in cases like this. The power of proving justification would be found in the country in which the person libelled resided, and therefore would be nugatory. After some further remarks, the learned counsel said that the information was bad because it had no right.

The parties agreed that the Chief Justice could look upon the whole record, and decide accordingly. Mr Hayllar resumed that it was impossible to shut one's eyes to the great extension of liberty granted to the press since the case of Peltier. Matter which appears day after day now in the daily newspapers from correspondents at the Court; could not exist were the case of Peitier law now-a-days. The case of Kinglake's 100 a moment be compared to anything in the libels before the Court. The record must be regarded in the light of the times and by the light of common sense.

Mr Hayllar here quoted from the judgment in Wason v. Walter, in which Lord Cockburn put the scope of the journalist in a very wide form-in which even libels upon public men were regarded as the penalty which public men had to pay for their position and the public good derived by public criticism.

The C. J. observed that the same had been said in previous cases. Mr Hayllar said that he would almost depend his case entirely upon Lord Cockburn's decision in Wason v. Walter; and he was sure his Lordship would be more Mr Hayllar said that, supposing that an likely to follow the Court decision of the insurrection had broken out, it was always | Judges it that case, than the old judgment of Lord Ellenborough. THE CENSORATE IN CHINA (From Notes & Queries on China and Japan, for January 1869.

In answer to the first of these queries, it is to be said that the Censorate as it exists in china undoubdedly had its origin in China, and its gratual growth to its present form and organization can be traced from an early period. note the members of the censorate, is first met with as far back as the Chow 居 dynasty (B. C. 249 to 202) there was estatablished by the Ts in was continued during the Hau 海 dynasty, and later, and in the 3rd year of Sui Ta yeh 隋大業 (A.D. 607) it was charged to Yii shih tai 御史臺. This again was maintained, with interruptions, through the Tang E and Sung Adynasties to the time of the Yuen 元, where, under Shih Tsu # 同日 or Kublai Khau, we find the distinctive characteristics of the office clearly laid down, Hungwu 洪武, the first of the Ming 朋 Emperors, in his 13th year (A.D. 1380) abolished the title, and two years later estaly known in English as the Censorate. Sometimes coëxistent with and sometimes existing in place of the above office. there are found under various dynasties two institutions of similar character, called the Chung-shu Sheng 中書省 and the Chu

The jurisdiction of the Chinese Censorate over capital criminal cases, and appeals from junction with the Tung-cheng Sz 通政司 and the Ta-li Sz 大理寺, (or Courts of Representation and Appeal, as they have been called,) was not a part of the Roman organization. The prominent feature of both institutions, and the one which not only causes their resemblance to each other, but also distinguishes them from any institution in the governmental systems of other nations, ancient or modern, is the authority which it conveys of officially criticizing and passing censure upon the public or private conduct of their fellow-country-E. #### MISCELLANEOUS.

WE trust that we may receive some more detailed accounts of the recent gunnery The title Yü shih 油 块, still used to de- trials at Fort Monroe than have yet reached us. For, although we scarcely expect to learn very much that is new from these experiments, we may confirm our own exnasty. In the time of the Ts'in & dy- perience and be able to speak with a sort of double authority of the disadvantage of blished an officer entitled Yü-shih-ta-fu particular defensive combinations. Indeed, it is abundantly evident, even from the in-御史大夫, who ranked as the second complete and somewhat vague accounts official in the government, the highest being | which have appeared, that the one lesson the Cheng siang It, corresponding to be derived from these experiments is that one which we have at some cost and the later Tsai siang \( \frac{1}{42} \). The title es- labour already spelled out—the lesson, namely, that any application of granite for fortification purposes is of doubtful advantage, and that rigidity of structure is fatal to efficiency. Bere were granite walls of immense strength, faced with two 12-inch ir n plates, and huge masonry structures. crumbling away into dust under a couple of blows. And so throughout the experiments, wherever granite or masonry or gneiss was used, there was a failure of the defence. It was not penetrated, in the Kidneys, Bullocks proper sense of the word, nor were the iron plates with which it was generally shielded pierced or destroyed; but the walls cracked and crumbled, and became so much powdered stone under the concussive effects of of the blows. There is a true American touch about the statement that after this Goats' Meat, blished in its stead the Tu cha yueu 都察 experience they have determined to try the institution which is now common-Moncrieff's system of defence. It is the old story very forcibly expressed, because, on the one hand, of the great protection which the granite might be supposed to have derived from the massive iron shields, and on the other, because the American guns which were brought to bear were, as | Turkeys, it happened, precisely those which would | Pheasants, Cock, be capable of inflicting the largest amount of damage of this sort.
